IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Arlington Baptist College Goes Online

Louisville, KY, May 27, 2005 - Dr. Denzil Edge, President/CEO of Learning House, Inc, and Dr. Helen Sullivan, Academic Dean of Arlington Baptist College, are excited to form a new partnership. With this new partnership Arlington Baptist College is thrilled to offer several online courses with the help of The Learning House. For students' convenience, the courses range in format from 100% online to 50-50 hybrid. Dr. Edge added, "Arlington Baptist College has seized the opportunity for the development of an online campus as means to deliver high quality programs to students around the world. Our partnership is a perfect fit for Arlington and the Learning House and we will both be gratified in this endeavor."

Each course is designed to maximize opportunities for students to collaborate and interact with the professor and other students. Arlington's on-line courses offer the latest in course technology including streaming video and threaded discussions. The Distance Education Program makes it possible for the student to study at home, working around the student's own personal schedule. The study materials are designed to help the student successfully complete the courses. Enrollment in the Distance Education courses may be initiated at any time. The courses are not tied to a semester structure.

"Arlington Baptist College is excited to be a part of this modern day means of delivering courses to students around the world via The Learning House. We anticipate great success through this partnership," said by Dr. Helen Sullivan.
