IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Learning House, Inc. with the Georgia Department of Juvenile Justice

Louisville, KY, June 16, 2003. Dr. Denzil Edge, President/CEO of Learning House, Inc., a comprehensive eLearning company headquartered in Louisville, KY, announced today that the firm has signed a contract with the Georgia Department of Juvenile Justice (GADJJ) to create training CDs and videos in special education for its teachers, administrators, and Juvenile Correction Officers. This overview of special education will help employees to focus on their role in serving children and youth with special needs. About 40% of the students served by DJJ have an identified disability, and the Georgia DJJ selected educational intervention as the number one treatment service to help children and youth become productive. Dr. Edge stated that the Georgia Department of Juvenile Justice is one of the best systems in the United States, and Learning House, Inc. is proud to partner with DJJ in developing and delivering high quality educational products to professionals and children. Jack Catrett, Director of Special Education for DJJ, said that DJJ needed a set of high quality professional development products and children instructional material. "We believe that Learning House, Inc. is the best source for helping us build and deliver these products".
