IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Learning House, Inc. signs contract with International Council for Exceptional Children

Louisville, KY, Apr 14th. Learning House, Inc., a comprehensive eLearning company headquartered in Louisville, KY, will develop and deliver courses via the Internet for the Council for Exceptional Children, a nonprofit organization dedicated to improving educational outcomes for individuals with disabilities, Dr. Denzil Edge, President/CEO of Learning House, Inc., announced today. Based in Washington, D.C., the International Council for Exceptional Children advocates for appropriate governmental policies, sets professional standards, and provides continual professional development. According to Dr. Edge, The Learning House will create online professional development courses for the Council for Exceptional Children that address the needs of educators working in the field of disabilities. In addition, Learning House, Inc. will host the courses on its learning management system and provide 24/7 tech support services. Dr. Edge stated that there is a vast shortage of teachers in the field of disabilities and that Learning House, Inc. will team with the International Council for Exceptional Children to offer high quality online professional development courses to its membership.
